Why Social Procurement?

Every purchase has a social, economic, cultural and environmental impact.

Social procurement is about harnessing your existing purchasing power to achieve economic and social outcomes, and to shape inclusive, vibrant, and healthy communities. Simply put, social procurement is buying goods and services from social enterprises and other social value suppliers such as diverse-owned businesses.

When you purchase from a social value supplier, like a social enterprise, you can procure the goods and services you need and contribute to your organization's goals including equity, diversity, inclusion, and ESG and impact the health of the communities of your employees and consumers.

Social procurement can support businesses with

Leaders

- Confidence in making a significant and impactful contribution to the community
- Access to a broader base of quality suppliers of goods and services and of skilled employees
- Unique skills training for project specific delivery
- Improved productivity and efficiency through access to local social value suppliers
- Enhanced reputation internally with employees and externally with stakeholders and clients

Social procurement is a growing trend and offers a competitive edge in the market

Who is asking for social procurement?

Government, institutions and organizations across Canada are increasingly including social procurement objectives in their RFPs, bids and other purchasing considerations. Implementing social procurement now allows your organization to:

- Anticipate the trend towards social procurement policy requirements
- Establish a competitive edge as a leader in the practice of social procurement implementation

Examples of social procurement practices

- Bids and solicitations which include questions on social enterprise and diverse-supplier certifications and an organization's own policies and supply chain practices. Social value responses are weighted in the final scoring.
- Targets for spend with social enterprises and diverse-owned businesses including direct spend and the spend of organizations in their own supply chains and in sub-contracts
- Recognition and storytelling of social procurement practices to showcase benefits and impacts to purchasers and consumers.

Who are Social Value Suppliers?

Social Enterprise

Social enterprises are businesses, selling goods and services in the marketplace, with a social, environmental, or cultural purpose, and they reinvest the majority of their profits back into that social, environmental or cultural purpose.

Social Value Suppliers

There are a variety of other social value businesses that can be incorporated into your supply chains including diverse-owned businesses such as Black-owned, Indigenous-owned and women-owned businesses, social purpose businesses and co-operatives.

What do they sell?

Social enterprises are all around us, including catering, maintenance, furniture, business services, cleaners, musicians, gifts, and more, all adding value to your needed goods and services. When you buy from a social enterprise a ripple effect of social and economic impacts occurs throughout your community.

What's the impact?

As social enterprise and other social value suppliers sales grow, they are able to achieve increased social value outcomes and impacts. These can include supportive job opportunities for individuals facing barriers to employment, inclusive training and employment opportunities, advancing diversity, equity and inclusion, and contributing to local economies.
